Retailers, Manufacturers and Importers

There are special reasons why Tiffany & Co. are able to offer peculiar advantages in exclusiveness, quality and value.

They are strictly retailers and manufacturers and import only for their own trade and never sell their goods through agents or other dealers.

Their manufactures of jewelry, silverware, leather goods, stationery, etc., combine originality of design, excellence of material, and the most skillful and artistic craftsmanship.

Their importations from the art centres of the world, through their Paris and London Branches, comprise a complete stock of china, glassware, marbles, bronzes, fancy goods, novelties, etc., and include many unique examples of the work of the leading artists.

Dealing directly, they are able to sell their wares at prices which will be found particularly attractive when compared with those of similar articles sold elsewhere. These advantages are not only extended to those who can visit the establishment, but through the facilities of a specially organized correspondence department, are equally available to those living at a distance from New York.

The Tiffany 1910 Blue Book, a 760-page catalogue, without illustrations, will be mailed upon request

SUB-FRESHMAN YEAR, 1905-1906

Were there ever Sub-Freshmen who'd reason to be
More proud of themselves and their doings than we?
From the moment our glorious class first began,
We're the greatest that ever has stunned Horace
Mann.

The teachers all said we were wondrously bright.
And the Record snapped up all the stories we'd write.
Then we gave some light opera—a very good show—
(We were asked to repeat it in chapel, you know.)
Of fraternities we'd a half-dozen or so,
Which filled pupils with envy and teachers with woe.

One, feeling societies' strict obligation,
Gave a matinee party, of real dissipation.
In the swimming meet, too, we were wonders, you'll find.

For tho' 1906 won, we came in close behind;
And the girls were as game, and would not be outdone,
For they entered a gym. meet and speedily won—
As a whole, there were never Sub-Freshmen, you see,
As clever, as bright, or athletic, as we.

FRESHMAN YEAR, 1906-1907

The next year our modest refinement was such
That somehow we weren't in evidence much.
Perhaps the Peace Conference had its effect,—
We were calmer, more tranquil, in every respect.

And all of our Junior Society plays
Will ne'er be forgot to the end of our days.
Why, we started one actress upon her career,
And she's dazzling Broadway as a big hit this year.

We were inconsistent in one little spot,
Our colors were green, and our class—I guess not!
So we changed it to blue (more appropriate yet),
And class pins we decided we simply must get.

We promptly made up a committee to go
And politely inform Mr. Prettyman so,
But alas! that a man so hard-hearted could be!
He refused each request—he denied every plea—
And we learned that the man in the wrong sometimes wins,
For we argued all year—and we still had no pins.

SOPHOMORE YEAR, 1907-1908

As Soph'mores we entered the famous fourth floor,
And cast aside infantile frolics of yore,
And sought to accomplish our highest ambition—
To reign through the school in an honored position.
A reform wave distinguished our brilliant career
And we gave poor H. M. a tempestuous year.
Our initial attack was a great raid on dress,
Which caused weeping and wailing and wholesale distress.

Big hats were forbidden, no rats were allowed,
Nor bracelets, nor lockets, nor anything loud;
High heels were disgraceful, high collars absurd,
Rings, bangles, and earrings at once disappeared;
And now that it's over, can anyone tell
What became of the puffs that became us so well?
This was merely a sample of what we could do
Towards establishing order, and discipline, too.
So, as Soph'mores, our course had come to an end—
But never the glory of class 1910!

JUNIOR YEAR, 1908-1909

Our next year was splendid, you'll surely agree,
For honors we won to an endless degree.
And we had such excitement in so many ways,
Some chose to live over those fine Junior days.
We were very original, you must admit !
What we ought to have done never mattered a bit ;
So we wholly refused to let custom dictate,
And our fine Junior play had a pitiful fate.
When it came to athletics, we couldn't be beat ;
The proud Senior class had to take a back seat,
For our courage and prowess demanded first place.
And in all that occurred 1910 set the pace ;      !
And our class of heroes supplied for the teams
Almost all the phenomenal players, it seems.
Then, too, it's with great satisfaction I state
That we won the cup in the great class debate.
But now o'er the rest of our fame I must pass,
And finish the tale of our great Junior class.

SENIOR YEAR, 1909-1910

As Seniors our history surely is great,
We're experienced, capable, stronger, sedate.
In athletics there's little our girls cannot do.
We're champions in swimming* and basketball, too.
We started the Civics Club well on its way,
And it looks now as if it had started to stay.
Our play was a marvel, we're bound to confess,—
From beginning to end 'twas a howling success.
The principal characters' acting was fine,—
The heroine lovely, the hero divine,—
And wouldn't Belasco and Dillingham rage
If they knew we had stars who could honor their stage.
And as for our year book—its merits are plain,
Every page reveals brilliancy, humor, and brain;
Its knocks are so clever, its drawings so great,
That (although, entre nous, we must modestly state
It's the finest that ever has stood on our shelves),
Dear Reader, we leave you to judge for yourselves.

BASEBALL, 1909

One looking at the different scores for last year could hardly call the season a success. In justice, however, the cause of its failures should be stated. When the team wished to practice, it was necessary to travel as far uptown as Dyckman Street, and then look for an open lot which was not already occupied, or not cluttered up with refuse. True, the team had the promise of using American League Park, but when an attempt was made to play there, we were promptly put out and no amount of arguing could get us back.

Our first game was with Peekskill, and with hardly a week's practice the team played in a manner that showed good material if it could be developed. But this proved impossible, and the season dragged on with many defeats and few victories. The team played its best game against Holbrook, defeating their strong nine, 5 to 1; but in the Adelphi games there was a reversal of form. In fact, all through the season, when we should have played our best games we played our worst.

We have a better outlook for 1910, for from last year's team we have eight members still in school.

FOOTBALL, 1909

When a willing football squad has a coach who knows his business, the greatest difficulty in turning out a good team is over.

This year our coach had to build an eleven almost entirely from the second team, only two of last year's players remaining. He promptly set the candidates to practicing regularly at Van Cortland Park, and we made a good showing against Mackenzie in our first game. Our second, with Englewood, we tied. A week later we defeated Irving for the first time in five years, the score being 21—0. This was probably the team's best performance. They showed a strong defense, joined with great power of attack.

So far the team had escaped the funk which usually comes once a season, but in the next game, with Hackley, we lost by poor playing in the second half. The next game we lost to St. Paul, but after that the team improved until it made a very creditable showing.

Great credit is due Coach Kersey for building such a team out of second string men. He taught the fellows a lot of football and made them obey orders. The school should also be proud of the candidates who showed enough school spirit to make the daily trip to Van Cortland for practice.

BASKETBALL, 1909-10

The basketball season opened earlier than usual, with many candidates and an outlook brighter than we have had for several years past.

The first game, with Barnard, came before the holidays, and, owing to a mistake on the part of the score-keepers, resulted in no decision; but we succeeded in winning the second game with Barnard by a safe margin. A week later we lost to Adelphi, but easily defeated Collegiate.

The squad then took its annual trip to Washington, Conn., where Gunnery, in an extra-period game, defeated us by a score of 11—9, but where we overwhelmed Ridge, 50—12.

After our return we had an unbroken string of victories, defeating in turn St. Paul, Berkeley, and Trinity, by large scores. In our last game with Adelphi we were beaten after a hard struggle.

There are three members of the squad left for next year, and we hope that they will form the nucleus of a team which can defeat Adelphi.

SILVER BAY

The summer of 1909 was the first time that a Horace Mann delegation has ever been sent to the Eastern Students' Conference. This conference is held for ten days every summer at Silver Bay, on Lake George, under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association. The Horace Mann representatives were chosen by the Girls' League, and half the expenses of each delegate were paid by the League.

Girls from nearly all the Eastern colleges and preparatory schools come to Silver Bay, and last summer about seven hundred gathered there.

Many institutions send their basketball team, or some of their crew, or their tennis champions, in order to surpass the rival colleges in the many contests. Horace Mann was fortunate in finding already at Silver Bay a young Horace Manner, who was immediately adopted as a mascot. The advantage of such a step was soon evident in the way H. M. distinguished itself in the swimming meet. Margaret Overton won both the short and long dashes, and several of our other girls won second place in various events.

One of the most interesting of the ten days was College Day. Each delegation prepared some "stunt" for the occasion. Horace Mann, Barnard, and Teachers College united as Columbia, though by individual school songs it was made clear exactly who represented what. This picture may serve as a better description of the Horace Mann delegation on that day.

All these good times, combined with the religious atmosphere, create a spirit "different" and unusual, much finer and more splendid, the delegates think, than is to be found at any other place in the country.

It was born in the mind of Mr. Belcher, the date unknown, but it was christened, and first entered into recognized being on November 12, 1909. Since that date, like any other normal child, it has been instructing its parent.

It was designed to "give practice in parliamentary procedure"—it has. Long and hot have been the debates as to whether a motion to donate the two cents left in the treasury to the home for blind babies could be laid on the table, or postponed till the next meeting. It was to "give practice in debate" also. Again I affirm—it has. Even if the debates have concerned such important topics as the mental capacity of its members as regards their voting efficiency, at least the austere parent must admit we HAVE debated.

To show how normal the child was, when it was only three weeks old it was unable to control all of its members; they formed a league against the body, and so nearly threatened the whole with a sort of filibustering gangrene that one of them had to be amputated. Sad was the loss.

Nevertheless the child grew and thrived; when it was eight weeks old it played for a whole meeting without its father. True, one of the members tried to leave the body, and was forcibly fired back at it, knocking over a table and two chairs. Then, just like a child, he was told that he wasn't wanted anyway.

But when you have gone thus far, gentle reader, you will see why a sergeant-at-arms was needed by that said body, even at the tender age of four weeks. The need was provided for and one was chosen. His work was a combination of that of a nurse and prison warden, and well did he accomplish his task.

Now that I have brought the child from the cradle to maturity let me leave it to work out its destiny under guidance of its founder.

THE COMING OF SPRING PRIZE POEM

HELEN CLARK, '10

Across the meadow, brown and bare,
And through the dreary, lonely wood,
There floated out upon the air
A song so soft, so sweet and rare,
That I in silent wonder stood.
The voice came nearer, and a spell,
Mystic and sweet, fell o'er the place;
And laughter, like a silvery bell,
Pealed from a nearby wooded dell.
It rippled on, and seemed to chase
The shadows and the gloom away.
Low murmurings came from all the trees;
Then out the forest danced the maid
Whose luring song had filled the glade.
Her sunlit hair waved in the breeze;
And, as she danced with airy grace,
The grass grew green beneath her feet,

And flowers sprang up in every place
To fill the air with odors sweet.
She called the birds, and everywhere
Their happy singing filled the air.
The trees awoke—each twig was seen
To push forth tiny leaves of green,
As bird and tree and flower obeyed
Her call and touch. The dancing maid
Crossed o'er the field with steps so light
It seemed her feet scarce touched the ground,
Till 'round the hill she passed from sight.
But rippling back still came the sound
Of her soft laughter, fainter grown.
With a strange awe my heart was stirred.
Lo, what a change in everything!
The flowers, the trees, each happy bird
Proclaimed th' arrival of the Spring.

A PROLOGUE TO A POPULAR TEACHERS' PASTIME

While automme winds blewe shrewdly thru the barbe<sup>1</sup>
Threc 'venturers thruste forth in parti-garbe,
A teachers' meetinge was the goale they sought
And eache much wisdome to the councile brought.
In prinus, a preceptor wyse y'elept,
Who rewled fulle justly, and gude order keppt;
A clerky mann who knewe his Horace welle,
Who eke could e cypher, rite, and reede and spelle.
When he theyre cominge to a conference bidden,
They spoke but lyttle, he the talkinge didde.
Longe time theye waited, who woulde gaine his ear,
His scholars lued, but stooode of him in fear.
The nexte in order was of feuer years,
One who the lyghte of historie reveres.
He on his lippe a whysker<sup>2</sup> keepes in plaice,—
Was it firste nurtured on another faice?—
At talkyng he was faire and free alsoe,
And reffyrenes<sup>3</sup> enjoyedne, that all mite knowe
Theyre tasks full welle. Nor was that alle,
Agyle and deft was he at playinge balle.
Famous his feetes at Harvarde<sup>4</sup>, campe, and schoole;
Too slye was he for any bluffe<sup>5</sup> to foole.
The nexte a ladye was of graycous miene,
Who neatness lued, nor was disorder seene
In aught about her. Soothlie she spake and sounde,
Yet in her speeche a sting was sometymes founde.
We "Yeare Booke" scriv'ness oft she urged to wurke,
That none theyre duty shoulde forgette or shirk.
Thus fared they forthe with ardente zeele
Some ille-starred scholare's faite to seele.

THE CONVICTS' HOUR

(Apologies to H. W. L.)

Between recess and the evening,
When the sun is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause at about two-forty
And then comes the Convicts' Hour.

I hear in the halls all around me
The patter of little (?) feet—
The sound of the lucky departing
Home to some far-distant street.

As a study I see through the doorway
Descending the broad hall stair
"Kid" Baker and big Mr. Inglis
And Belcher with slick black hair,

A grim look, and then a silence,
Yet I know by the fire in their eyes,
They are plotting and planning together
A task of immeasurable size.

A sudden voice at my elbow
As my thoughts to brighter days roam:
"Write out this exercise neatly
In ink—before you go home!"

They pile up the work still higher
As I groan and twist in my chair;
If I try to bluff out with excuses
They get on to me everywhere.

They almost swamp me with Latin,
They make me review two months' Greek;
Till at last, overcome with emotion,
I make a great effort and speak:

Do you think, O terrible teachers,
Because you have caught me now
Such an old villain as I am
Cannot escape somehow?

For much as I'd like to do History,
To make up my Civics and Math,
A previous engagement prevents me
From staying within range of your wrath."

With pitiless faces they leave me
A sullen slave to their will;
Had I not sneaked ten minutes later
I might be sitting there still.

ODE TO AMSTERDAM AVE.

O Amsterdam, most charming part
Of Harlem, 'tis toward thee
We gladly flock at twelve o'clock
And quarter before three.
In wintry storms and summer's heat
Thy stores we patronize,
Nor dost thou ever cease to be
A heaven in our eyes.

Tho' some still use the lunch room
And others e'en go home,
Nor deign to put away "hot dogs"
Or carbonated foam.
What able-bodied Horace man
When chance and cash are given
Refrains from thy society,
Thy banquets and high livin'?

What though the "procs" be all around,
Their fierce, relentless mood
Is always calmed and mollified
By thy ambrosial food.
Thy charms attract all classes
Of school society
From Senior to sub-freshman
Dear Amsterdam, to thee!

C. K.

There is a young fellow named ———,
 Whose face always shows signs of worry;
 If he wants to cut gym,
 No use looking for him;
 He's too wise to be caught in a hurry.

A cunning young fellow is ———,
 For roughhouse in class he just craves :
 But then, after three
 In the Civics Club he
 Is a model the way he behaves.

That handsome young fellow, ———,
 Each day in a new vest doth go,
 "Though expensive," says he,
 "You can take it from me,
 It does make a bully good show."

A noted spel artist is ———.
 His fame dates way back to the ark;
 Admiring we gaze
 When to sing he essays
 For his voice is like that of a lark.

There is a young giant named ———,
 Whose height is about six feet seven;
 He comes to school
 For about ten minutes a day,
 And the only trouble with him is that
 His name won't rhyme with anything.

So here's to good old 19—,
 Sing her praises again and again;
 Her career it is checkered,
 Criticized by the "Record,"
 The Juniors, and teachers—But then—

THE SENIOR OF 1910—
AS HE IS.

AS HIS FATHER
SEES HIM

AS HIS MOTHER
SEES HIM.

AS HIS SMALL
BROTHER SEES
HIM.

AS THE FACULTY
